

Lesson Plan with a Laura Shellhorse Twist: The alphabet has twenty-six letters. You have the option to omit six of them. Write an ABC list for a Eudora Welty short story or longer work. (The easiest thing to do would be to use letters to represent characters. Ex. L=Laurel—She was the daughter of a judge who marries a white trash gold digger after her mother dies). You could also use adjectives to describe characters. For example, G=Garden in “A Curtain of Green.” The main character was fighting her own demons as she maniacally gardened each day.
